

The Reason for a National Government

Brian G. Mc Enery

briangmcenery@gmail.com

Sat. 28 Sept. 2013

The problem I outlined yesterday in relation to a Quantum Temporal Singularity created by the Good Friday Agreement can only be resolved by establishing a national government, influenced only by Article One of our constitution. All of the articles after Article One are still in a state of quantum flux, similar to what physicists describe as Schrodinger's Cat. The Dublin Institute for Advanced Studies needs to be brought on board to explain the veracity of my position. The supreme court cannot question it, as they are not established in Article One.

One further point. I have searched the constitution to find out where the civil service are established and from where they get their power. As far as I can see, there is not one mention of them. There are weak references to 'as shall be decided,' but that is not enough for such a power hungry organisation.

It is illegal in this country to set up a secret organisation, and to have a Secret Civil Service administer our country is completely at odds with Article One.

The genesis of this is contained in my poem, 'Good Bye Agreement,' which I wrote about the time the agreement was suspended. I repeat it here for those who do not have a copy of my first collection of poetry Faiteadh na Gabhláin - Folding the Branches, pp 150.

Good Bye Agreement

There was a time once when we dared not hope
To lift the daily ritual of a well listened news
Out of duty
Ears bent
Souls attuned to the tragic litany of
A province sundered by words

And now it comes again

Slowly
Inexorably

The essential message here is that a political peace is not a true peace. We have seen enough of that throughout recorded history. Five thousand years of virtual constant war. The resolution requires new knowledge, and I could not recommend more strongly the book, 'Manual for a Perfect Government,' written by Professor John Hagelin, a world renowned expert in invincible defence.

Sin É.